Supplier and Distributor come together for innovative solutions

Rubbermaid and Supplies House have signed a distributor agreement which they believe will assist contract cleaning companies to improve their service to end customers. The agreement brings together two of the most innovative companies in the industry, combining their strengths and proactive approach to improving cleaning and becoming more environmentally and cost conscious.

Rubbermaid's range of products include both traditional products and new innovative ones, such as the Pulse mop which eliminates the need for buckets of water, and custom recycling bins to help end users recycle more efficiently.

The Supplies House are a rapidly growing distributor known for continually looking to help their contract cleaning customers clean better, quicker and more efficiently, especially for unusual and challenging cleaning problems and situations.

In the short time since the agreement was signed, this new powerful team combination has already together successfully improved one client's cleaning service to their customers.

Brian Chapman (Managing Director of The Supplies House) said: "We have been looking to extend our range to our growing customer base for some time with more innovative cleaning systems. Rubbermaid fit that requirement perfectly. I have been very impressed with not only the products, but also their personal commitment to help our customers."

Wendy Barker (Key Account Manager At Rubbermaid) said "We know The Supplies House go way beyond the standard service provided by many distributors by going the extra mile to help their customers in all ways. We have already seen how working together can help their customers, and look forward to building a very close proactive partnership."
